Industrial Development Director Will Speak Nov. 18

J. E. Savely

Kenneth W. Lane

Joseph E. Savely, industrial development director of Norfolk and Western Railway, will speak to local officials and business leaders Wednesday, Nov. 18, at the presentation of an economic study of Appomattox County, Va. The study was made by Virginia Electric and Power Company.

The presentation will be made to Otha W. Martin, Jr., chairman of the Appomattox County Board of Supervisors, by Kenneth W. Lane, Vepco community development manager. The dinner meeting will be held at 6:30 p.m. at the Parkway Restaurant, Appomattox, Va.

Vepco conducted the study at the request of the Appomattox County Board of Supervisors. Company researchers worked with a local committee composed of area representatives in obtaining data to be included in the report.

Among the major topics covered by the study are the area's physical assets, manpower, market resources, government and finances and representative industrial sites. The report will serve as a directory of current information and is designed to be used by anyone interested in the economic development of Appomattox County.

Copies will be distributed to officials of the county and towns, planning commission, Appomattox Chamber of Commerce, local industrial development groups, Virginia's Division of Industrial Development, the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce, railroads, colleges, universities and local public and school libraries.

Commenting on the study, James A. Smith, chairman of the local study committee said, "The study should prove valuable in promoting the economic development of our area. We are grateful to Vepco for their contribution to our development program."

Tree Planting

Planting a "crop" that takes from 30 to 50 years to harvest may tax the patience. But trees – the long-range crop referred to – can be one of the most important crops the American farmer can plant.

J. P. Alvis, Jr., Chairman of the Appomattox county Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation (ASC) Committee, points out that planting trees provides many benefits –both to the farmer and urbanite. And these benefits will become more important in the future as the population grows, and demand for wood and wood products increases.

Besides the obvious benefits of tree planting – such as the production of lumber – trees help reduce flooding and erosion and help stabilize and improve water supplies, according to Mr. Alvis. They also provide many intangible benefits such as beautiful scenery, recreational opportunities and improved wildlife habitat.

"Tree planting even helps us fight pollution," the Chairman declared. He pointed out that nitrogen tends to move with water and that direct run-off from fields can cause nitrogen pollution of streams. However, if water is first diverted through grass or woods, the nitrogen is used up before the water gets to the stream.

Since tree planting and other conservation practices benefit everyone but return farmers little or no immediate loan benefits, the Government – under the Agricultural Conservation Program (ACP), shares with farmers the cost of planting trees and other soil, water, woodland and wildlife measures, Mr. Alvis pointed out.

Under the ACP, Appomattox County farmers last year carried out 568 acres of forestry practices, Mr. Alvis said that this total included 34,000 trees or shrubs planted and 135 acres of existing timber improved.

"Despite this cooperation between farmers and Government, much remains to be done if we are to meet the expected 80 percent increase in requirement for wood and wood products during the next 30 years," Mr. Alvis said.

Scouts Plan Conservation Project

By Robert E McClenny, Jr. Conservationist

Much is in the news about pollution and our environmental crisis. Much of our high material standard of living has come about at the expense of our environment. Pollution of air and water, decrease in living space and a loss of wild native is a result of much of our progress. Much has been said and done about our environment problems. There have been youth demonstrations automobile burials, etc. All of this has drawn a lot of attention.

Others are approaching the problem in a quite practical manner but have not received much publicity. The educational programs in our schools are being adjusted to include nature studies.

The Boy Scouts of America are planning a nationwide educational program beyond the traditional conservation studies. That special activity is Project SOAR (Save Our American Resources). It is to be launched in Boy Scout Week Feb., 1971. This program is designed to arouse all members to their responsibilities for the future and through them alert millions of other Americans. Project SOAR is involved in citizenship training. The basic objective is to get attitudes of concern for the quality of the environment and to motivate action programs that will improve that environment.

Major emphasis on Project SOAR will be in acres of water and air pollution and litter prevention. The program and action must be constructive and not "finger pointing". President Nixon emphasized this point in his environment message to the Congress: "The fight against pollution, however, is not a search for villians. For the most part, the damage done to our environment has not been the work of evil men, but has it seems the inevitable by-product either of advancing technology or of growing population. It results not so much from choices made as from choices neglected, not from malign intention but from failure to take into account the full consequence of our actions."

Project SOAR is only a start. Pollution is not going to end in 1971, nor 1972, but what boys learn and do in 1971 must apply in future years and pass on to future generations.

"Scouting Magazine states, "We can plant millions of trees, we can protect millions of tons of topsoil, pick-up thousands of tons of trash, and do many more things but still not achieve our purpose."

We, in the Soil Conservation Service, along with the Soil and Water Conservation Districts commend the Boy Scouts of America for their educational approach to the environmental problem, and we also commend the local schools for their curriculum additions to include environmental structures.

Marketing

Taking a look at the grain marketing situation of recent years J. P. Alvis, Jr., Chairman of the Appomattox Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation (ASC) Committee, commented that the farmer who can store his grain close at hand generally is in a better position to sell where he can get the best price.

"In today's language, he keeps his options open. The grain can move in the direction of greatest demand," Mr. Alvis said.

Two recent actions by the U. S. Department of Agriculture will help keep locally-produced wheat at home until marketed, the ASC Committee Chairman said, and thus encourage more orderly marketing and better returns for producers.

Changes in the farm storage and drying equipment loan program have made possible expansion of on-farm grain storage and drying capacity. The program, administered by the Appomattox County ASCS Office, now permits loans on drying equipment at 85 percent of net cost up to $5,000, provides loans for storage based on two years production of a farm's eligible commodities, and permits inclusion of essential instorage operating equipment in loans for storage and drying equipment.

In another action, the U. S. Department of Agriculture is setting up new loan rate structures for wheat, grain sorghum, barley, rye and flaxseed which will help keep grain – underloan within the producing area until marketed.

Mr. Alvis, said, "Although I won't go into the technical details of these USDA actions, I think people will be interested in knowing that these changes are designed to help the farmer market his crops to his best advantage. Crops sold in the marketplace instead of being acquired by the Government are good business for farmers and all other taxpers."

He said grain producers needing on – farm storage or drying equipment should check with the County ASCS Office to get full details on the loan program.

He also reminded producers that any changes in the 1970-crop county loan rates will be publicized as soon as available. The price-support loan rate in Appomattox County for eligible wheat producers will be $1.32. County loan rates on grain sorghum, barley, rye, and flaxseed will be announced soon.

Miss Richardson Entertained Saturday Evening

Mrs. O. W. Martin, Jr., Mrs. Clark Lewis, Mrs. Ronnie Ranson, Miss Kathy Marshall and Mrs. Jimmy Marshall, all of Oakville, were hostesses on Saturday evening at a miscellaneous shower in the Social Hall at Mt. Comfort Church honoring Miss Betty Jo Richardson.

The marriage of Miss Richardson to Clarence (Peaches) Smith will be an event of November 27th, in Mt. Comfort United Methodist Church.

Arrangements of flowers in the bridal motif decorated the church social hall. Guests included Mrs. Herbert Richardson, mother of the bride, Mrs. Jerry Smith, mother of the bridegroom, friends and relatives of the honoree.

Tea Honors Bride-Elect

Mrs. Joe Megginson, Jr. and Mrs. Thomas Richardson entertained with a tea Sunday afternoon at the Richardson home honoring Miss Betty Jo Richardson.

Miss Richardson's marriage to Clarence Edward Smith will take place the evening of Nov. 27 in Mt. Comfort United Methodist Church.

Fall flowers accenting a color note of white and pink, flanked by silver candelabra with white tapers, centered the tea table.

Mrs. Jane Barnswell of Greensboro, N. C. poured.

A gift of china and a corsage were presented to Miss Richardson by the hostesses. Guests included the mother of the bride Mrs. Herbert Richardson, Mrs. Jerry Smith, the bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Wesley Coleman, grandmother of the bride and friends and relatives of the honoree.

Dr. Daniel said. "Some have major ailments, but there area tremendous number with cuts, I'd say that actually about 40% of the people we see are not true emergency cases."

"I think it is important that people realize we are really private physicians who happen to be located at Lynchburg General," Dr. Massie said. "We are not paid by the hospital nor by the city – we are paid by the people who use our services."

ternship at Virginia Mason Hospital, Seattle, Washington.

At present, there are two shifts: 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. and 6 p.m. to 9 a.m. Theoretically, each shift averages the same number of patients.

The numbers are staggering. "We average between 60 and 90 patients in a 24-hour day."

Social Notes
